Porbes, rather more than eighty miles, I don't re-member to have ever travelled. At the base of the Weddin Mountains, some four or five and twenty weddin mountains, some four or nive and twenty miles from Young, there is a steam saw-mill, a police station, and a small store. At Bogo Bogalong, six-teen miles farther on, there is a police station and a squatting station; and at the Pinnacle, sixteen miles squarting station; and at the Pinnacle, sixteen miles beyond that again, there is another police station. Eight miles neare to Forbes there is a small settle-ment clustered round the engine and crushing machinery of the Pinnacle Quarts Crushing Company. The number of men stationed at the three police attains I have enumerated has been very much reduced of late, only one serjeant and two troopers being located at each of them. Beyond the signs of life given out at these places, I don't think I met halfa-dozen to prome slong the whole line of road, which is not to intents and purposes absolutely deserted.

The second of the way is through a level scrubby country, at bark pine forests intervening with gently unculating granitic ridges. Some of these active unusualting granitic ridges. Some of these have a very picturesque appearance, the peaked cones into which the granite ranges occasionally form themselves being made to appear even more peaked, by the pines, the cypress, and cherry tree that grow out from smongst the rocky clefts. You may easily believe how dull and menotonous such a road nust be to the solitary traveller, who has not even so much companionship as the passing of an executive. n uch companionship as the passing of an occasional fellow-wayfarer would give. When I visited this line of road two years ago, I gave a description of the more noted spots upon it, and it would be needless for me to go over the same ground now. The Weddin, and the Pinnacle are names that the passed away bushrangers have rendered notorious throughout the whole country; but their evil reputation will, doubtcss, die away as rapidly as has done the fame of those who first gave them their ill name. The country now s as quiet and as safe to travel as if no marauders had ever infested its roads—and the names of those upon whom misplaced admiration bestowed the wildes terms of gallantry and courage are all but forgotten, and when mentioned casually only with a shudder at their crimes and at the fearful retribution that fol-worked. The nearest to Forbes is Croker's Reef, my miles from the crushing machine; three miles beyond that again is the Soldier's Reef; and three miles beyond that again is the Ironbark Reef. The last is the one that has given the best returns, although the one that has given the best returns, although the yield has not been such as to satisfy the men engaged in quarrying the stone. Patches of it, however, have turned out very rich, and some have made pretty good piles. These patches have all been obtained near the surface of the reef, and experience has shown that the richness of the stone rather decreases than increases with its depth.

There is an engine and crushing machinery in close proximity to the Soldier's Reef, but these have bee proximity to the solder's rect, but these nave been lying idle for some tine past, having no longer a supply of water to keep them going. Thus all the stone has to be carted to the machine of the Pinnacle Quartz Crushing Company, or distances of five, eight, the stone is ls. per ton per mile, so that the stone coming from the Ironbarks costs lis. per ton for carriage. The charge for crushing is 20s. per ton, making a total charge of 31s, per ton. The gold is of a low class, and worth only 65s, per oz., so that with a yield of one ounce to the ton, the miner would receive for his labour 34s. The manager of the crushing machine gave me a return, from which it would appear that the average return of the stone crushed at this machine had been 13 or per ton; but on talking with the miners and others, I was assured that the average had been very far below this, whilst several rich parcels of stone that turned out hand-somely went to swell up the average larger than it really ought to be. Then again, accounts were very conflicting as to the quantity of stone per man per week that could be raised, the estimate of the miners being far less than that of the employers. I think, however, it may be assumed that a party of men working vigorously can raise from six to eight tons per man per week. Taking off the cost of powder, fuses, tools, &c., this amount of stone, if it gave one ounce per ton, would pay the miner well, for it would ive from £6 to £8 per man per week, an amount not be laughed at in the present hard times for the to be laughed at in the present hard times for the diggers. But the men say that working the stone don't pay, and the greater part of those on the Pinnacle reefs are making preparations for leaving, so that it may fairly be assumed that the yield has not been so high as was represented to me.

bccn so high as was represented to me.

To test the matter in another way, let us look at the actual yield of gold from this quarter. As near as can be ascertained,—and I may say that I am indebted to the courtesy of the manager of the Orienal Bank at Forbes for the amounts of gold received from the several different localities on that gold-field,—the gold received from the Pinnacle during the last six months was 599 oz. 13 dwts. 19 grs.—say 600 oz. This would give an average of 100 oz. per month, or 25 oz. per week. The number of men working on the several recfs at present is about forty, having ranged between that and fifty during the past six months. These 25 oz. of gold, divided amongst forty men, would give en obstruction to the speedy passing away of large quantities of water such as must have poured down in carriage and crushing would have to be paid, at a rate that mounts up terribly high when the stone is poor, since it is paid for by the ton and not according o the yield. This test from the amount of gold receive is perhaps about the best that can be applied, and I am only sorry that I was not able to get at the actual tonnage crushed, and the actual amount of gold re-turned. The machine consists of eight stampers of turned. The machine consists of eight stampers of over 5 cwt, each, though only seven of these are worked. They crush the quartz in the usual boxes, breaking it up into an exceedingly fine powder which is carried out by a constant stream of water over inclined boards provided with ripples or narrow gutters running at right angles across the boards and supplied with quicksliver which catches up the gold as it passes, From these ripples, the stream passes over a long table as it is called, only slightly inclined and covered with a blanket. This blanket catches up any small particles of gold that being very light and any small particles of gold that being very light and minute have floated and been carried beyond the minute have floated and been carried beyond the ripples on the surface of the water. The machinery is worked by a sixteen-horse power horizontal engine and is capable when in full work of crushing 100 tons per week. It was brought from the Billibong and was set to work on the lat May last, since which time it has been constantly going, with the exception of a month during which it was waiting for stone, there being no teams offering to draw it. teams offering to draw it.

Of the Billibong, or Currajong as it is now more Of the Billibong, or Currajong as it is now more generally named, the same thing may be said as of the Pinnacle. The miners, who after all are really the only true judges of what does and what does not pay, have been dropping off by degrees, and clearing out for other localities, as they could get rid of the stong they had on hand. Of the three engines at work there, one passed through Forbes whilst I was in that town, on its way to a reef recently opened at King's Plains; a second is somewhat out of gear and has been laid up for some time; the third has recently stopped from other causes. Thus the whole affair, as far as the Currajong is concurred, is completely at a stand still. The number of miners completely at a stand still. The number of miners still on the ground is variously estimated at between forty and sixty—probably fifty would be very near the mark, the total population of the place being about 120. I may tell you that these figures are only a very rough guess, as there is no possible means of getting at the exact number either of miners or souls; and, as they are very much scattered about, an estimate has to be made of persons who never come at all within sight. The yield of gold from the Currajong for the sight. The yield of gold from the Currajong for the sight. The yield of gold from the Currajong for the sight. The yield of gold from the Currajong for the sight. The yield of gold from the Currajong for the sight f week. This average, however, forms no true guide for the present, since it is taken from the month; returns of the first six months of the present year, during which the population of the Billibong was much larger than it is at present, and since the gold has been produced from stone raised long previously when there vere more miners on the ground.

The total amount of gold sent down from the Lachlan Gold-fields during the first six months of this year was:—In January, 731 oz. 5 dwts. 3 grs.; in February, 604 oz. 14 dwts. 3 grs.; in March, 337 oz. 4 dwts. 18 grs.; in April, 340 oz. 1 dwts. 11 grs.; oz. 19 dwts. 2 grs.; in April, 340 oz. 1 dwt. 11 grs.; in May. 1198 oz. 7 dwts. 3 grs.; and in June, 564 oz. 19 dwts. 2 grs., making a total for the first six months of 1865 of 3776 oz. 11 dwts. 16 grs. To this amount Forbes contributed 1735 oz. 19 dwts. 22 grs.; Currajong, 1440 oz. 17 dwts. 22 grs.; and the Pinnacle, 599 oz. 13 dwts. 19 crs.

The total population of the gold-fields has been estimated by the officials at 3000. It may be supposed that they should know better than I what the numbers are, and I quite admit that they should, at the same time I think the number over-estimated, and should be inclined to 6x it at 2000 rather than 3000. should be inclined to fix it at 2000 rather than 3000. Of the total population, 120 are assigned to the Billibong, and 100 to the Pinnacle. The total number of miners is somewhere about 700; this can be pretty accurately reached by the number of miners' rights issued. For the first six months of the year 417 miners' rights were issued by the Gold-fields Commissioner; and from the lat July to the present time, 150 others, or 167 in all. There are some who never come near the Commissioner to take out their right. come near the Commissioner to take out their right which is not needed by them unless in the case of which is not needed by them unless in the case of a difficulty; and there are others, again, who come on to the fields with rights obtained elsewhere, making the total about 700, as given above. Of these, fifty are located on the Billibong, and forty at the Pinnacle, leaving, in round numbers, about 600 miners working on the country round Porbes.

From the 1st July to the 31st December, 1864, the amount of gold sent down by escort from Forbes was 8700 oz. 4 dwts. 5 grs.; whilst during the first six months of the present year it was only 3776 oz.

I have before given my opinion of this field, when I visited it nearly two years ago. I then came to the conclusion that such a thing as a lead would not be found upon it, and that the gold existed in patches scattered here and there over the field, and just as likely to be struck in one place as in another. After a more careful examination of the ground, and the different sinkings, and after many conversations with persons who have been long working on the place, I am even more firmly convinced of the correctness of am even more firmly convinced of the correctness of the [conclusions I then came to, than I was formerly. The new lead, Grassett's, that has recently been struck. is an evidence that I was right. Gold was brought up by the boring machine, and on the spot bored upon a shaft was sunk. When they were down they hit gold, as the boring rod had indicated, with a fine depth of wash dirt of 8 or 9 feet, and giving about an ounce to the load. To what extent the same result ounce to the load. To what extent the same result will be obtained in the prospecting claim is not yet known, nor will it be for some time to come; but this is certain that of all the shafts sunk north of the prospecting claim (and some twenty or thirty have been put down), not one has bottomed upon payable gold, though the "colour"—that is, a speck or two to the dish—has been obtained in one or two. South to the dish—has been obtained in one or two. South of the prospecting claim some sixteen or seventeen claims have been taken up. Of these, No. 5 has been bottomed upon gold that is hardly payable, whilst thirty or forty yards farther on the boring-machine has been at work in every direction, to cut the line of the supposed lead, without bringing up the slightest indication of its existence. The prospecting lead lies nearly midway between the bed of quartz known as the Britannia Bore and the old acut blead being in ites nearly midway between the bed of quartz known as the Britannia Reef and the old south lead, being in my opinion a run of gold from the former to the latter, caught with the accompanying debris of washdirt in spine-indentation of the bed rock when in ages past the gold-laden waters passed over their then denuded surfaces. This has been proved to be the case all over the Lachlan. Wherever gold has been found it has been in these cavities or basins of the bed rock, in some deep inequality of its face, and not in one continuous stream running between rocky walls, and following on its course for miles, broader or narrower, as the walls approach or recede from each other. Where the shafts have been sunk around Forbes, the face of the country is nearly a dead level of alluvial deposit, showing that in the early days of the continent's formation that the whole must have been submerged equally by the primeval floods. At such times the gold, with the heaviest of the debris, would naturally sink into such hollows as there might be in the face of the primal as the Britannia Reef and the old south lead, being hollows as there might be in the face of the primal rock, to be buried afterwards by the debris of future floods that would sweep away any gold that might have been deposited on the level and exposed surfaces of the rock. This bed-rock is found at depths varying from 90 to 250 feet below the surface, and the miners have so far recognised the truth of part of my argument, that they never attempt to sink when the boring red touches bottom at anything under 120 feet, since experience has shown them that it would be useless to do so. Now though there are such inequalities below the surface as are represented by the difference of 80 feet and 300 feet, yet the same checked, what is now a plain would be a vast lake until the pent up channel allowed them to flow off. During this temporary and partial rest the gold and heavier debris would be deposited. This seems to me to be as near to the rational solution of the mystery poor weak man is permitted by the higher Intelligence to go.

But whilst I say this much, and whilst I insist upon the correctness of my own views, it is only fair to your readers that I should state that the Gold-fields Commissioner, Mr. King, and his predecessor on the field, Mr. Brown, both of whom are gentlemen with Commissioner, Mr. King, and his predecessor on the field, Mr. Brown, both of whom are gentlemen with an intimate and extensive acquaintance with gold-fields workings, believe in the existence of leads on this field, and that it was mainly by reason of the arguments used by them with the Government that, for the first time, the frontage system was established in the colony. Many of the miners also give in their adhesion to the frontage system, though, as far as regards the actual workers, I think I have a very sarge majority with me, and that the general belief lies rather in the patches of gold than in leads. However, there is the fact that the lead is proclaimed, and the frontage system adopted; and now is again seen the old fines of the Lachlan, only on a smaller scale. Standing is the centre of the town of Forbes, at about a quarter-past II o'clock, the on-looker may see some thirty or forty persons coming up from the new lead. The prescribed two hours of shepherding, from 9 until II o'clock a.m., have been gone through secundum artem, and the shepherds come up to saunter away a half hour in the town, though upt under such inspiriting auspices as they were wont to do, some three years back. Now, the men are shepherding on their own behalf and are only too anxious to get a chance to set to work instead of being a large and the same to set to work instead of being a in past days abstraction of the secondum. the man are shepherding on their own behalf and are only too anxious to get a chance to set to work instead of being, as in past days, shepherds for others, getting their money for nothing, and only hoping that the line of the gold might not come their way to spoil their pleasant little game.

I have said enough about the so-called new lead, the recognition of the so-called new lead, the recognition to whom the sold lately seed down they cared nothing for anything but gold that was large, solid, and palpable, and took no care to collect the finer gold that was carried away in the thick muddy water that was used, and landed in holes into which the tail races had their exit to the extent in which the tail races had their exit to the extent in most cases of 7 or 8 dwts., and in some instances of as much as 10 and 12 dwts. to the load. All this stuff is now being carefully put through the puddling machine, washed, and run out over quick-silver ripples, and atterwards over tables lined with blanketing, as previously described, as the stuff is very easily washed, and soon breaks up in the puddling machine; a very good return of gold is projured, paying the men handsomely for their labour, and for the use of their horses and material. Sometimes parties owning large paddocks of this sludge had sold them to the puddlers, or have had them puddled on terms, but in almost every instance a good payable return has been made. Then again, there have been parties who have worked for the last there have been parties who have worked for the last twelve or eighteen months in some of the old claims. I have not been able to see their mode of operations face of the bed rock and occasionally drop across little patches or leaders, that when struck, pay them well for time that may have been previously lost.

There is one party of six, near to the entrance to Forbes from Lambing Flat, who have been burrowing like moles, from the one spot for the last twenty months. They have a whim and elevator at work, and are constantly busy over wash-dirt. I was told by a gentleman who received the information from themselves, that they were "making good wages." On being asked by my informant, what singular that men so working should settle down with such pertinacity, and when once established should so continue for months, and yet the fiat has gone forth that the ground is no good, simply because no lead has been obtained, and no jewellers' shops rivalling in richness those of the far famed Ballarat are to be hit upon. There are leaders and gutters and patches of gold distributed all over the field, and were the ground worked systematically it would pay as well as any gold-field in New South Wales has done.

There have been some very curious formations dis-covered here underground. Portions of trees were found at a depth of 200 feet from the surface, not found at a depth of 200 feet from the surface, not petrified, but reduced by the pressure of the super-incumbent mass to the hardness and consistency of black marble, which the wood very much resembles, the pores and layers however can be very clearly traced, leaving no doubt as to the original nature of traced, waving no doubt as to the original nature of the substance. A few, but only a very few bones of animals have been found, but at a considerably less depth, I have seen none of these, but they were supposed by those who found them, to be the remains of animals of the kangaroo species. One curious of animals of the Eangaroo species. One curious cature is that of the Britannia Quartz Reef, it was hit upon by accident in sinking a shaft on the Britannia lead, and for a time was worked with great success, so much so as to induce the erection of a crushing machine in immediate proximity to the shaft. Th was presumed to be the line of the reef, but none, however near, or however distant, could hit it, no matter what the direction in which the shaft was put down. After a time those who were on the reef found the stone getting poorer, and the vein narrower, and now the engine and machinery are standing idle, and the man in charge of them isformed me that the reef had given out altogether. Then, again, in the Rise and Shine claims the parties came upon a deposit of wash dirt lying between the walls of two solid rocks. wash dirt lying between the want or two soul in its This dirt contained very little pure gold, but in its place were a number of stones, smaller or larger, all thickly studded with gold, but which it required great thickly studded with gold, out which is required great labour to pick out. There was then no crushing machines on the ground, and the gold laden stones, after the stuff had been washed, had to be picked out. and carried to the hut. They were then crushed by hand with flat irons in the most primitive style, and yet a handsome return was paid, though not enough to satisfy the shareholders in those days of golden promise. Had the whole of the stuff from this promise. Had the whole of the stuff from this interstice of the rocks been put under the stampers of a crushing machine, a very tine yield would have been obtained, as a proof of which I may mention that the claim-holder lately crushed a heap of the rejected stone and obtained from it a return of half an ounce to the ton. This opening between the rocks may have extended any distance, for it was never followed up, and although a kind of rude stamping machinery was prepared, the claim was ultimately deserted.

THE DOG NUISANCE.—ON SUNDAY evening Dr. Pringle met with what might have proved a very scrious accident, caused by a dog rushing out from the side of the road while the doctor was returning on horseback from Eastern Creek. The horse was alarmed, and threw its rider to the ground, who was severely cut and bruised in the face from the fall. To persons travelling along our roads, and riders through our streets, the numerous tribes of worthless dogs suffered to range at liberty have become an intolerable and dangerous nuisance, requiring the extreme course which it is stated the police authorities intend to take under the provisions of the long disused Dog Act.—On Friday afternoon, a little boy, four years of age, son of Mr. John Taylor, when in front of his father's Missins Chinawan.—A Chinaman, named Harry, who has been in the employment of Mr. Castnor, of the Dogtray Road, and engaged in clearing ground for some time past, was missed about a week ago from his but, situated on the bank of a creek about three or four hundred yards distant from Mr. Castnor's residence. Although inquiries have been made by the police, and by Mr. Castnor and his men, about the neighbourhood, nothing has since been heard of him: he left everything belonging to him in the hut. It being surmised that he has committed suicide, of met with some secidental death, the creek was dragged in the vicinity of the hut, on Friday, by the police, and the scrub searched, but without result. Whether the Chinaman recently found in a dying state at Hemebush is the same, does not appear; but this is not thought likely, as Harry was an industrous man, conferned with his situation, and apparently strong and healthy.

DISTRESSING SUICIDE OF A RAILWAY

MAII. (GUARD).

An inquest was held yesterday forenoon, before Dr. R. C. Knaggs, coroner for the district, on the body of John Urban Vigors, one of the guards on the Great Northern Railway. The first witness called was, lienzy Brien, who deposed as follows:—I am a farmer, living in Patrick-street, Newcastle, on my road to Newcastle this morning I saw the body of the deceased lying or the foot-path on Lake Macquaris Road, near the junction: I saw a large quantity of blood, but my pony would not let me go near to him; I saw a pistol near the body: I gave information to constable Smith, on the Lake Macquarie Road; I identify the body as the same I saw on the Lake Macquarie Road, also the pistol produced; I saw a leather oag lying a few feet off him; I knew the bag belonged to the mail guard; the body I have just seen lying in this house, is the one I saw this morning.

Patrick Smith, on oath deposeth: I am constable in the police force, and am stationed on Lake Macquarie Road; shout half-past 6 o'clock this morning I was called on by a man of the name of Henry Brien, who told me there was a man lying dead on the road towards the pottery: I immediately went there and saw the man lying dead, with his head towards the pottery; I saw a large quantity of blood about his face and on the pathway; I found his right hand was stretched out and a revolver within a few inches of it; I examined the revolver and found four of the chambers loaded and capped—one chamber discharged; there were some spots of blood on it; I then searched his pockets and a bag alongside of him; in the bag I found a letter addressed as follows:—"Not to be spened, but delivered to Mrs. Vigors, Mrs. John Urban Vigors, Church-street, Newcastle.—J. U. V., 19th, 8th, 65." I identify the letter produced as the one I found in the bag; Palso found itwo powder-flasks and a quantity of caps, and a red comitorter, in the bag; after the coroner and Dr. Howker had seen the body I had it removed to the Junction Inn, where it now li line.

William Thompson, on oath, deposeth: I am postmaster at Newcastle: I have seen the body down stairs lying in this house, and I recognise it as the body of John Urban Vigors, one of the mail guards on the Great Northern line; I have known him for some years; he has always discharged his duties efficiently and henourably; he was easily excited, and a man of nervous and excitable temperament; I know of nothing that would have produced unwaual excitement within the last two or three days; I am not aware of any charge brought against the deceased of neglect of duty; I am aware that sergeant Thorpe had instructions to search the Singleton mail bag only and while it was in deceased's charge, and the mail bag was opened in my presence; I have no reason to believe there was anything to implicate dece-sed in any dishonotrable transactions; I had previously received information that letters posted at Singleton for Sydney were missing; Mr. Vigors had the only charge of letters from Singleton to Newcastle, and when the bags were opened, sergeant Thorpe told me they were correct; I did not think deceased seemed excited at this cirrumstance; after the mail bag was searched, deceased asked the sergeant if he would search his own bag (the mail bag searched was a scaled bag); I had reason to believe that Mr. Vigors was not suspected; it was somebody else; I may say it is not the test occasion I have opened a Singleton bag at the request of sergeant Thorpe, who had suthority to open the bag from the Postmaster-General; I have not seen Mr. Vigors alive since Thursday night.

Mrs. Emma Vigors, on outh, deposeth; I am the widow of the late John Urban Vigors; he was employed as mail guard on the Great Northern Railway; Mr. Vigors returned home about 6 o'clock has evening; he went to bed about 10 o'clock; he appeared melancholy, and asked me if I had heard any news, as Mr. Hill, the Singleton letter-carrier had told him that sergeant Thorpe had searched his bag as well-his conscience was clear, but he couldn't bear any suspicio

John Martin on oath deposeth: I am railway guard on the Great Northern Line; I know the deceased John Urban Vigors; he was mail guard on the Great Northern Line; I noticed he seemed very much depressed and solitary last night; I thought as if he had been offended; I am aware the mail bags were searched on Thursday, and since that time he appeared to be very much depressed in mind and spirits.

Richard Ryther Steer Bowker, doctor of medicine, legally-qualified medical practitioner of New South Wales, haying been duly sworn, deposeth: This morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock, I was desired by the Coroner to go down the Lake Macquarie to view the body of the deceased Mr. Vigors, who had been found shot; I went down on the side of the said road, about two or three hundred yards from the pottery, and found the body on the eastern side of the road; the body was covered with a blanket, and was in charge of a policeman; on the body having been uncovered, I found it lying on its back, inclining towards its left side, the head lying towards the pottery; the hands were lying down a little distance from the side of the body; there was some blood on his face, and a very little movement ands the blood issue from the nose and shouth; there was a considerable quantity of flood tyling on the ground, as if it had accessed from his head, being in a continuous line from his head, being in a continuous line from his head; being in a continuous line from his head; there was a some little blood a couple of fest or so from the body, on a ledge which rose shout a foot or softom the boundary of the road; on examining the mouth of deceased, I found in the palaste of the saults, a hole leading through the body as a staying of the left hand on its palm, such as might have been thanked the right side of the back part of the wound being towards the right side of the back part of the wound be Columbus took second place, Brisbane third, and Minnie, who was very much out of condition, all behind. The lot passed the stand in the position named, but at the back of the course Columbus came up and took leading place. He kept it for about a quarter of a mile, when Binbane came up and passed him easily. Driscoll, on Columbus, tried hard to regain his lead, but could not get beyond the little grey's quarter. In the straight running, Brisbane was leading by a length, Columbus second, Madeap about two lengths behind, and Minnie pulled. The winner was not touched with whip or spur at any part of the race.

SECOND RAYL.—The Prince of Wales Stakes of farty soctevities, with a sweepstakes of two soccesigns each added, for all herses, winner of the Maiden Plate excluded; weight for age; one mile and a half; the owner of the second horse to receive the sweep.

Some trouble was experienced in getting the horses away, owing to the fractiousness of Brenda, who would not come up to the other horses. When she did get away she was at least ten lengths behind the leading horse. Prince of Wales get a slight lead, which, however, was speedily taken away from him by Quadrant, who made the running. At the lack of the course Brenda came up and obtained third plate, the pace being too much for the three greys. Rob Roy was extactled.

A good start was made, and Young Mormon at once went to the front, and made the running. Bacalyptus was last, bard held, the remainder of the horses in a cluster about a length and a half behind him. The same positions were maintained until they got to the back of the course, when Eucelyptus made a spurt, and passing the ruck childcaged the leading horse. After racing some distance neck and neck, Young Mormon was pulled off, and Eucelyptus got a lead of about half a leopeth, but was compelled in maintaining it to go his very best. At the dip, just previous to entering the straight running, Young Mormon again cameting, and a splendid race home ended in a victory for Young Mormon by a neck. The finish was beautiful, and there is no doubt but that if Driscoll had not a jockey qual to himself on the other horse he would have won. As it happoned all the jockey tactics of which he is the possessor were not equal to the occasion, and he had to rest content with second place. Tom Thumb a bad third, the rest all behind.

The hot were got away well together, when Chance at once went to the front, followed closely by Caliph, Oakwood, and Hotspur in a ruck, the two favourites holding. Chance increased his lead, and at the half-mile was a dozen lengths in advance, Motspur publing off, and going last. The same positions were maintained at the back of the course, but at the half-mile post Forester came up and took second place. At the gully, he raced Chance, and deprived thathborse of the lead. On passing the stand, they were all in a ruck, the grey leading slightly, Nonsuch second. I a few more strides the two were clear of the other horses, and the race began. Ferester still kept slightly ahead, but at the heavy part of the back of the course it was plain that the weight was beginning to tell upon him, and Nonsuch, after two of three actions the process of the meeting c

The great absurdity of the plan consists in sending aparty to Wentworth to work up 1500 miles against a stream running no where less than from two to three miles arthough and the course of which there are places in the stream in its present low state assumes the character of rapids, against which I do not think a boat can be taken with ear.

THE STIDET MONNING HERALD, TUDBERY, AUGUST 25, 1965.

If you were marked to the property of th which had a use then for want of better things. If we have lost the golden pippin, we have at least done with "services" and "bullace" among fruits, the hips and haws and sloes of the dessert-table, and as good as done with medlars and quinces. We know nothing of a queer list of vegetables—rocambole, salsity, tansey, skerrits—which have given place to others better and more succulent. We need on longer eat mutton hams, which were so convenient to families living far from a market, nor dry geese in the chimney, nor expend our appetite on stockfish which needs as a preliminary to be beaten with a sledge-hammer on an iron anvil till it is reduced to atoms, and afterwards made catable by ill-merited and ill-repaid cares. We do not need the hints and receipts how to restore tainted things to a seeming freshness. Our cooks, we trust, are called to no efforts of self-sacrifice in the cause of restoration like that in the plain-spoken warning, "They will stink and lock yellow, but you must not mind that." To balance these drawbacks are sturgeon, bustards, shufflers, and a variety of obsolete delicacies which perhaps would not take the same rank with us, for there is evidently a coarser taste consulted than gives the law in our day. Puddings, for example, meant something very different from, and more substantial than what we understand by the word. We see that Sir Balaam's "two puddings' may really have represented profusion, and that the proverbial solid pudding had a superiority over empty praise which we cannot ascribe to it from our lighter notions on this head. One receipt for a pudding startles our weaker nerves, as English tragedy used to do French refinement—namly, that which begins with the direction, "Before you kill your hog have ready" so and so.

We have noted Mrs. Glasse's own natural taste for simplicity, but various local messes which it is her duty to describe are in another vein altogether. Such is "a very fine sweet lamb pie," in which we find lamb in company with sugar, grapes, citron, currants, caul

Another flop, and I looked round for Beautrit, who had passed through the gate, and was quietly making for his cottage.

"I'll have that fish," I mentally vowed, "and that before the night is over!"

To get the chance of a look at the pike, I trod lightly upon the bog land, and approached with the gree est caution the reed which margined the pool; then, putting aside the bulrush and the tall vank grasses, I got an undisturbed view of the water. Over my head three or four stunted tree spread their branches, and some birds that had their nests therein took flight at my approach. I stood as still for some minutes as the most inanimate objects around, when suddenly something fluttered in the boughs above, and a sparrow just fledged fell through their foliage, and on to the surface of the water. As quick as thought—quicker by far than I write the fact—a fish of full thirty pounds, came to the surface, and with the same flop bolted the luckless fledgling with one distension of its jaw, and sank again out of sight.

"I have you," thought I, "as sure as your name is Pike!" I crept away from the broad as cautiously as I had approached it, and walked over to the cottage of an acquaintance some mile or two off; borrowed a ligger line (the best tackle those parts in general can afford), and with this and a stout pea-stick, with a nick for the line at the smaller end, I returned to the decoy. Here, after hunting the edges for a nest or two, I was not long before I got a brood of linnets just ready for flight. Taking one of these, I tied a double eel-hook between the wings, and with the bird-hait in one hand and my improvised rod in the other, and the end of the ligger coiled up in my side pocket, I again, with cat-like movement, drew nearer and nearer to where the leviathan had sunk. Not being, however, prepared again to see him, I was somewhat startled at finding him lying with his back almost out of water, and feared the slightest movement of my rod would scare him and spoil my sport. In this predicament, it occurred to m

(From the Special Correspondent of the Specialor.)

I MAVE preferred to leave comment upon the revelations of the trial of the Washington assassins to the editors of the Specialor, should they desire to make it. But, as the end seems to be very near, I will tell you of the conclusions which have been drawn from it by most of the people whom I meet,—conclusions which are also my own. We regard it as shown beyond a doubt that the affair was no mere independent attempt of a few reckless fellows, but the result of a long-pondered, deeply-laid, widely-spread conspiracy,—that the men engaged in it were employed and furnished with money by the so-called Confederate Government,—that these men were expected to throw the Government at Washington into confusion, at first by carrying off President Lincoln and some of his Cabinet as prisoners, a project which itself certainly involved their death if they resisted,—that this plan was subsequently changed by the immediate managers of it for the plot to assassinate instead of taking prisoner, and that the change, though not avowed, or perhaps spoken of in terms, was known to some of the insurgent leaders. We see no reason to doubt the very explicit evidence of a man who swore that on the steps of his house in Charlotte, Jefferson Davis said, on hearing of the assassination, "If it were done, it were better it were well done; "and that the next day in the House, when Mr. Breckenridge deplored the event as unfortunate for the South, Mr. Davis replied, "Well, General, I don't know; if it were to be done at all it were better it were well done; and if the same were done to Andy Johnson, the beast, and to Secretary Stanton, the job would then be complete." We believe that although the evidence yet produced would not convict Mr. Davis in a court of law as an accessory before the fact, he is morally responsible for Mr. Lincoln's murder, which he could have prevented.

It is not for the purpose either of self-justification or controversy that I notice an editorial criticism on my letter in the number of The Speciator of May 20, which arrived yesterday. It is there remarked upon my saving that, although we have a wast number of small landed proprietors who till their own ground, we have no peasantry, that this word "peasantry" is the only English word you have ever known your correspondent misuse." I fear that my father and my grandfather, who taught me the English that I use, would not give me such a certificate. I know they never did while they were alive. And so I accept the compliment, not as paid to me, but to my countrymen; for as far as idiom and meaning of words are concerned these letters, I presume to think, may be accepted as fair examples of the manner in which most educated Yankees use their mother tongue. But it is further remarked that in England a peasant is what my statement implies that he is not, a small landed proprietor who tills his own ground, and that the word your correspondent is thinking of is "labourer." It becomes the native of one place to be very diffident in even seeming to question the evidence of a thoughtful and observant native of another as to usage in the latter; yet I shall venture the opinion that British and American usage of this word are not quite so different as my critic seems to suppose. If "peasant" means nothing more in England than a small landholder who tills his own ground, of course I am wrong. But if I have read our literature aright, the word for two hundred and fifty or three hundred years has conveyed another idea, expressed something more. His weight causes the cage to descend, and on his passing out by a hole in the side into a pen from which he cannot return, the cage rises for the next comer. A variety of most ingenious self-setting mouse and rat traps are shown, the best being No. 54, by Mr. Wood; No. 58, Mr. Braddock; and No. 97, Mr. Richardson. The simplest, the cheapest, the most generally applicable, and the most readily made, is an improvement on the old figure of four trap, invented by James Miles, gardener to Mr. C. Woodd, of Rosslyn House, Hampstead. It consists of a box or hurdle, supported by two sticks, which are held together by a slit cut in the side of a twig carrying the bait. Any one could prepare such a trap with a pocket knife in a few minutes. It can be made to catch a mouse or a mastiff dog, to act as a live trap or as a dead fall; it might remain set for months in a corner without its efficacy becoming impaired from exposure, and is as efficient as it is simple.—Daily Telegraph, June 9.

TUESDAY, AUGUST 22, 1865.

So Mr. Parkes has had the honours of a public entertainment. We have nothing to say against that portion of a constituency who approve of the conduct of their representative inviting him to a festive entertainment, but we should prefer the good old word "dinner" to "banquet." There is something genial, social, unpretending, and hilarious in a dinner bet people who are invited to banquets are princes, and the entertainment which they grace by their presence commonly discards the simplicity and warmth and good fellowship expressed by the old English word meal. It has been, indeed, a standing joke upon the Continent, that with Englishmen the most prominent part of their political as well as social organisations is represented by the word "dinner." tions is represented by the word "dinner."
Transcendental philosophy and abstract patriotism present a poor figure beside cuts of sirloin and plum pudding surrounded with blue flames. The word "banquet" is not sufficiently names. The word "banquet" is not sufficiently naturalised to be commonly understood by the people at large. They think it something pretentious and formidable. They would hardly recognise their part and share in the demonstrations which start from so high-sounding a name. It is among the first touches of that ambitious taste which is always struggling for development in the midst of the most democratic institutions, and it is not least exhibited by those who are loudest in their praise. Besides all this, a banquet seems to imply at a distance that a very grand gathering has taken place. The contrast would be rather humorous if the names of the guests were all detailed, and if the measurement of the banqueting room were recorded, whereas and partisans. American phraseology has often been ridiculed in its departure from the simplicity of old English phrases. It may be, however, excused by a people who have the Rocky Mountains as a barrier, and the Mississippi as a stream—who contend for a hearing with the Niagara, and who by the touch of a lucifer can illuminate a whole State with jets of liquid fire. We are rather too small in the of liquid fire. We are rather too small in the world at present to use such grand phrases, notwithstanding the unquestionable brilliancy of our political history.

The enumeration by Mr. PARKES of what has been done in this country since responsible government came into operation might be very well put in contrast with what was accomplished before it. Has with what was accomplished before it. Has there been such a growth as we might reason-ably have expected in population and wealth, considering the new elements brought in by the great gold discoveries? Is justice more fairly there been such a growth as we might reason, ably have expected in population and wealth, considering the new elements brought in by the great gold discoveries? Is justice more fairly administered? Is the public money more economically spent? Do we owe anything to more recent legislation in advance of the fiscal system left by Mr. Deas Thomson? Here our food and the tortuousness of its course, a moderate flood takes some time in coming down. Much time would be saved if communications there is the real highway of the district, and the utility of the river for the purposes of navigation will be greatly increased by the wire. Scale on This Electuals.—The following promotive to the river is the real highway of the district, and the utility of the river for the purposes of navigation will be greatly increased by the wire. It is only for part of the year that there is not substituted in the river. We have been required to state that no nitination of the river. We have been required to state that no nitination of this has been received by the Scale large the river. We have been required to state that no nitination of the river. Has our Land Act operated more beneficially than the system of South Australia which shows an increase of £140,000 in that small colony during the year, and which remains just as it was so far as law is concerned luring the DEAS THOMSON Administration Is our financial position sounder than it was then? Does our credit stand as fair with the world? True, we have municipal institutions, and it was not the fault of the exist; but that dogged opposition which opposed their introduction would probably have been still successful had not the onward nave been still successful had not the onward movement of the whole world, and the influx of new population, borne down the prejudices of that period. That we have increased in numbers and in wealth is not to be questioned. numbers and in wealth is not to be questioned. Indeed, to have stood still would have been to fall into helpless decay. But there is no reason for boasting in the retrospect of that era which divides us from the hour when we met to celebrate the establishment of what is called responsible government. Mr. PARKES no doubt gratified his hearers when he threw back Mr. Lowe's reflections Mr. Parkes no doubt gratified his hearers when he threw back Mr. Lowe's reflections on the working of our institutions; but there was little justice in the comparison. It is true we have not riots at the poll, and our form of bribery does not take the character of so much per head. We are indebted for the quietness of our elections to the ballot, which keeps from public knowledge the progress of the poll. In large constituencies no class needs to hide its opinions, but bribery exists to an extent which, if it prevailed in Great Britain, would utterly and hopelessly ruin parliamentary government. There is the bribery of those parties who derive advantage from local expenditure, and who receive the personal benefit of those public works undertaken for no other purpose than to reward parliamentary support. There is the bribery of the members of Parliament, systematic and perpetual, which is reduced to a system of log-rolling, not in this colony only, but wherever similar institutions have been established for some time. It would be easy to point to some of our most conspicuous men who have shaped their conduct in the House according as they have been gratified or disappointed in obtaining a share of public money, or as they have been enabled to impose their relatives and friends upon the public funds. This is so well known as hardly to be disguised. When we see a change in the tone of some of our speakers, we do not imagine that they have altered their political opinions, or that they ever had any; but we know that the Minister of the day has either been more complaisant or more obdurate—that he has either gratified or disappointed them. The fate of a Ministry, and of the measures with which it is charged, often depends entirely upon the proportion of this kind of people to the whole body of representatives. We do not at all doubt that in the House of Commons there are many similar examples but if do not at all doubt that in the House of Com-mons there are many similar examples, but it is the proportion in which these stand to the whole number that affects the course of par-liamentary government and justifies or repels the imputation of corruption. We have no more right to impute to Parliamentary than to any other Government the vices of individuals when they stand out as exceptional and are reprobated by the great majority: individuals when they stand out as exceptional and are reprobated by the great majority; but the state of parliamentary representation in this colony and elsewhere makes corruption nearly the rule rather than the exception. Is bouring colony a large sum of money was paid by the squatters to secure the neutrality of certain, say twenty, members of the House, and that by this means a threatened measure was modified? Are not the names of those persons as well known in the clubs of Melbourne as the name of the pures the clubs of Melbourne as the name of the partiot that ever mounted a stump or triumphed on the hustings. It is in this form, indeed, that the aspect of the future is most discouraging, the aspect of the future is most discouraging. Communities like our own, when in a state of rest, leave Government much to adventurers who choose to seize it. There are times, no doubt, when the spirit of genuine patriotism throws off the incubus, and sweeps away abuses which cannot be endured; but it must be admitted that we pay a very large price for the name, if not for the reality, of liberty. There is as little reason for boasting as for despair.

It is proposed to construct a line of telegraph from Wentworth, on the Murray, to Fort Bourke, on the Darling. This is an under-taking much needed to give completeness to our inland telegraphic system, and to bring the our inland telegraphic system, and to bring the remotest part of our territory into communication with the capital. It ought to have been done before now, and would have been done if the colony had been covered with district councils, or if there had been anything like a local distribution of the land revenue. Considering her remote vast of our territory. dering how remote part of our territory is from the eastern seaboard, on which the metropolis is situated, and how discontented many of our remote settlers are, and how cheaply telegraphic lines can be constructed, it would have been policy to have been forward in granting accom-modation to the out settlers. But expenditure is more determined by Ministerial than by national

However, the Government is willing now to spend the money conditionally, on a guarantee of five per cent. for five years, from responsible parties in the district. This guarantee has already been exacted and given in some other instances. So far as it establishes some local esponsibility for the reasonableness of the outay this guarantee is good, and it tends towards the development of the municipal principle. There is a little anomaly, no doubt, in exacting it for telegraphs and not for other more expensive works, and in exacting it from the most thinly populated districts, and not from those better able to bear the burden; but it will not do to apply too rigid a rule to Government proceedings, or to expect a theoretical consistency.

It will be well worth the while of the settlers on the Darling to give the guarantee. Even if they had to pay the whole of it, they would not be losers. The more remote a station is, the more proportionally valuable is telegraphic communication with it. To be able to send a message in a quarter of an hour to a place with which the course of post takes three or tour weeks is an invaluable advantage, and largely corrects the inconvenience of distance. Each individual settler's share of the guarantee is a corrects the inconvenience of distance. Each individual settler's share of the guarantee is a trifle compared with the money that may be saved or gained by a prompt communication with the capital on certain special occasions.

Telegraphs are not roads, but a line of telegraph up the Darling will have the special value of increasing the facility of inland transit. The internal the coal bighaver of the district and the could be rapidly passed up and down the river as to the depth of water at the different stations. Many trips of the steamers would be stations. Many trips of the steamers would be possible which at present are not adventured, and there would be less danger of the vessels being left high and dry up the river and unable to get down. A line of telegraph, running westward from Deniliquin to South Australia, is at present in course of construction. The Darling line would branch off from this at right angles, thus placing all the townships on that river in communication with the capitals of the three colonies. The settlers on that river are understood to be with the capitals of the three colonies. The settlers on that river are understood to be very cosmopolitan, and to have no very strong provincial attachments. Some of them trade with Adelaide, some with Melbourne, some with Adelaide, some with Melbourne, some with Sydney, according as their previous business connections make it most convenient. The proposed line of telegraph will equally accommedate them all: though, to complete the circuit, and to guard against casual interruptions, it would be desirable to construct a line down the Namoi River from Tamworth, or some other place on the Northern route. This would also have the effect of placing Brisbane in pretty direct communication with the valley of the times they would be entirely submerged. The surveyor's report on the engineering possibilities and difficulties of the question will be looked for with purch interest.

It may be that a careful consideration of the It may be that a careful consideration of the question will shew that it is not worth while to spend too much on a water transit which may in a few years be superseded by a railway, and that the real value of the river to the next goneration will be its irrigating rather than its navigable capacity. The facilities for constructing railways in Riverina have as yet only been appreciated by the few who can look in advance. So far as our own railways are concerned, we have not yet reached the castern corned, we have not yet reached the castern border of the great salt-bush plain, and are too much absorbed in struggling with the trouble-some gradients of our hilly district to contemplate what lies before us in that direction. But in Victoria the idea of Riverine railways is more fully entertained. From that side the interior is more easily accessible. The Victoria terior is more easily accessible. The Victorians have already reached their northern boundary, and are pining for further conquests. Nothing, probably, but the fact that they have no territorial authority over Riverina has prevented their pushing their line farther into the basin of the Darling; and it is easy to understand why they are anxious for the separation or annexation of Riverina, either of which will give them facilities for pushing their projects. Over the comparatively level tracts of the interior, railways may be constructed for very little more than the cost of the permanent way. Tunnels, cuttings, and embankments will be things unknown, and even bridges will be few and far between. When, therefore, we come to compare the cost of the effective terior is more easily accessible. The Victorian come to compare the cost of the effective come to compare the cost of the effective canalisation of the Darling from Wentworth to Fort Bourke with the cost of a railway from Bathurst or Deniliquin to the same place, it may turn out that the railway will be both the cheaper and the more effective mode of transit, and that the best thing to be done with the river will be to make it for a time as navi-gable as a moderate expenditure will admit of, and to look forward to the time when the channel of the river should be studied more with regard to the storage of water than to the with regard to the storage of water than to the passage of steamboats. By damming the river at intervals immense supplies of water now running to waste might be preserved, and lateral channels cut at right angles to the river might convey this water for many miles into what is now waterless country. Some illustrations of what may be done in this way have already been furnished on a small scale by the enterprise of individual squatters, and a larger enterprise of the same on a small scale by the enterprise of the same squatters, and a larger enterprise of the same kind is now in course of execution to conduct the waters of the Lachlan by the Willandra Billabong. But though at present enterprising individuals can cut and come again as they like, individuals can cut and come again as they like, it is obvious that the time is not far distant when water-rights will have to be the subject of special legislation. The water in the rivers is common property, and must be distributed for the greatest good of the greatest number. The arid interior will have to be divided into irrigation districts. A contour survey of each will have to be made, and the extent and direction of branch canals will have to be determined. tion of branch canals will have to be determined in harmony with the general plan. This will form part of the duties of those local councils to the construction of which in some form or that there is some reason for believing that the rumour is to be doubted.

Found Drowned.—The body of the lascar belonging to the mail steamer Northam, who fell from the stage of that vessel on Tuesday night last, was found floating in the water near the vessel yesterday afternoon. The corpse was removed to the dead-house, at the Circular Quay.

Sudden Draft.—Yesterday, the City Coroner held an inquiry at his office concerning the death of a woman named Hidget Kearney, who died suddenly on the 18th instant. Deceased lived in Castlereagh-street. On the day of her death, a neighbour, hearing that she had fallen out of bed, went to her house: she sent for a cleryyman and a doctor, but deceased died before a medical practitioner could attend. Coroner's finding: "Deceased, aged eighty-one years, died suddenly from natural causes."

CORONER'S INQUEST.—On Saturday, the City Coroner held an inquest, at the Irish Harp, Irishtown, Liverpool Road, respecting the death of a child, named Matilda Crane, the daughter of a farmer living in that neighbourhood. Deceased suffered from cold and other allments. Dr. Shaw deposed that she died from convulsions; and the jury found that "Deceased, aged two years and four months, died suddenly from natural causes."

PRINCE OF WALLS THEATRE.—Last evening, the entertainments at this theatre were given by the officers and seamen of H.M.S. Salamander, and the house was consequently well attended. His Excellency Sir John Young and General Cameron honoured the occasion with their presence. The bill contained the farce "Done on both sides," the comedy of "The Golden Farmer." and the well-known burleaque "Villitins and his Dinah." Some of the characters were admirably sustained, eliciting much applause, and although there was occasionally some unevenness in the run of the dialogue the shortcomings in no way detracted from the fun the entertainment afforded. It was announced that the proceeds are to be tendered in aid of St. Andrew's Organ Fund.

Kerokene Experiment.—The experiment referred to the other day, as them in progress, has since been completed, realising, in some measure, the results predicated. The quantity of mineral put into the retort was 370 lbs. avoirtupois, which produced 161 lbs. crade oil, leaving a residuum in the shape of coke of 157 lbs. It will thus be seen that there is some 52 lbs. of the original quantity to be eccounted for as weste in some form or other. These portions, takes from the outcope, can hardly be considered as fair samples of what the esam may produce, for they bere originate were procured, it is understood that the parties of the same of the confidence of the locality in which these speciments were procured, it is understood that the parties of the same of the confidence of the content of the content again of being mineral squally to the locality in which these speciments were procured, it is understood that the parties of the same of the content of the content of the locality in which these speciments w

CLANDESTINE MARRIAGES

CLANDESTINE MARRIAGES.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sig.—I am not aware whether the disclosure which took place at a late inquest, as to a minor, a youth of nine-teen, having been married in the house of a minister, in this city, at 9 o'clock at night, without the conent or knowledge of his parents, whe were living within a short distance (not of the city, but of the minister's house), and within half a mile of the Registrar's Office, attracted the attenties of the Registrar-General, but, if not, it decidedly should do so. It is notorious that a large majority of marriages so celebrated are clandestine, and that generally throughout the colony the requirements of the Act, as respects the consent in writing of the parents or legal guardians, are violated most unscrupulously with impunity.

What can the Registrar-General be about, that he does not scrutinise the returns made to his effice, and prosecute the debaquents? To say that he cannot trace or detect them is simply to say that the forms, or regulations, or administration of his department, one or all are defective.

At all events, the evil is so notorious and so serious that, unless, as is probably the case, the Registrar-General is too overwhelmed with the multifusious labours of his department, it is difficult to conceive why so efficient and conscientions an officer should not have devised and enforced measures for detecting and curing this social canner.

The Marriage and Registration Acts (19 Vic. No. 39 and 19 Vic. No. 39) continues (even so far as to investigate the age of your mother's grandmother, for statistical purposes), that I repeat it appears inexplicable, why this scandal, the results of which turnish special material for commentary, in the Registrar's Annual report, is not put an end to, as so easily might be, by ordinary official precautions and vigilance.

I remain, Sir, your obedient servant,

THE WHATHER AND THE CROPS.—We seem at once to have launched into spring, yeaterday being the warmest day we have experienced for several months. What with the late dry weather and the dusty roads, we might have imagined that spring was fairly setting in. Hard frosts, however, at night dispel the illusion, and their severity, coupled with the lack of rain, are by no means favourable to the farmer. The cry is still for more rain, and, although hitherto the young wheat crops look very bealthy, it is not likely that they will continue to be so long should the dry weather continue. The indestigable Chinses, who are our only providers in the way of green greeeries, have made their appearance with bamboo and basket during the past week, and are retailing kitchen-garden produce at exorbitant rates. Considering the early season, and the other absence of anything like herbags, it says much for their skill and industry that they have such commodities to dispose of.— Western Examiner of Saturday.

Thursting's Brisbone Courier states that the property of the Cabulture Cotton Company, together with the stock and buildings in connection with it, has been purchased by Mr. G. Raff for the sum of £4000. Arrangements are now being made for properly working the cesate, which will shortly be planted with surer case.

Ferdinand Wolfshehl, Esq. Darmsdtadt, Gross: Hessen.
Honorary Secretary:
P. A. Bell, Esq.
This company has been initiated with the view of establishing in Australia a branch of industry for which the colony of New South Wales offers great advantages; and which it is confidently believed would produce a very large return upon the capital, and be of great benefit to the country in preventing a serieus drain for the importation of glass and porcelain, the consumption of which is great and increasing.
The manufacturing of glass and porcelain is universally probable.

The whole supply of the Southern hemisphere is at present derived from Europe, at a cost snormously enhanced by freights, charges, breakage, and various commercial commissions and profits. These are asid to reach not less than 50 per cent. on the original cost of the manufacture in Europe; therefore the local manufacture would enjoy a protection to that extent, the benefits of which would be absred by the Company.

It is proceed to establish the works at Burwood, near the spot selected. A pottery in full work is aiready on the land, giving a profit.

Although the intention is ultimately to manufacture glass, percelain, and pottery of all the descriptions in general use, and to "order the operations of sugarving, cutting, painting, and gilding, dtn., it is proposed to commence with these articles only which are most largely in decrease of the latter of simple or name the proposed of the commence of the latter of simple or name the proposed of the latter of simple or name the proposed of the latter of simple or name the proposed of the latter of simple or name the proposed of the latter of simple or name the latter of the latter of simple or name the latter of the latter o

A large portion of the capital will, it is capetally.

The directors named will continue in office until the Company is fully established, when they will be replaced by the choice of the shareholders. Fifty shares to be the qualification of a director.

Applications for shares to be sent in before the 10th day of September, addressed to the Secretary, at 143, Pittstreet, in the annexed form, and to be accompanied by a deposit of one shilling a share to cover preliminary expenses.

FORM OF APPLICATION FOR SHARES.
The Australian Glass and Porceiain Manufacturing Company (Limited).

Gentlemen,—I request that you will allot to me shares in the above Company, and I hereby undertake to accept the same, or any less number that may be allotte to me, to pay the deposit of per abare thereon and to sign the Memorandum and Articles of Association required by the Limited Liability Act, when called upon t do so.

Sydney. To F. A. BELL, Secretary. GLANMIRE GOLD MINING COMPANY (Limited).
Capital, £40,000, in 20,000 Sharee of £2 each.

Provisional Directors:
George King, Esq. G. W. Allen, Esq.
J. de V. Lamb, Esq. T. C. Breillat, Esq.
J. L. Montehors, Esq.
Bankers:
The City Bank, Sydney.

The Commercial Bank, Bathurst. Solicitor: G. P. Slade, Esq., 2, Gresham-street, Sydney. Broker:

This Company is formed for the purchase of the mineral land of the Glammire Estate, within seven miles of Bathurst. The property is EIGHT SQUARE MILES in extent, more or less, and contains a vast gold field, which is already occupied by a considerable mining population.

The purchase money is £27,000, of which £16,000 will be payable in each, and £11,000 in shares of £2 each fully paid up, but upon which no dividend will accrue until the subscribers are in receipt of a dividend of 10 per cent, per annum. This will leave a working capital of £13,000, which it is believed will be ample for all purposes.

The needs of payment will be as follows:—
Ten shillings per share on allotment.
Ten shillings per share in one month.

with a plant, the cost of which will be about £2000. Mr. Combes estimates that from this source an income of over £9000 per annum will be obtained, or over 20 per cent, per annum on the capital. If his estimate be correct these works can be increased to an indefinite extent, as the gravel hille run along the whole length of 8t. Anthony 8 Creek. The above estimates may and must look excessive, but even if subjected to a heavy discount, will still leave a very handsome return to the shareholders. The proprietors are no convinced of their probable truth that the capital has been purposedly narrowed in order to admit as small a number of subscribers as possible to a participation in the expected pr. fits.

APPLICATION.

To the Provisional Directors of the Glanmire Gold Mining Company.
Gentlemen,—I hereby request that you will allot use shares in the above company, and I hereby agree to accept the same or any less number which may be ellotted to me, and to pay the deposit of 10s on allotment, and the calls as specified in the Prospectus, and to sign the Deed of Settlement when required to do so.
Dated this day of 1865,

DROSPECTUS CURRAWANG COPPER MINING COMPANY.

Capital, £60,000, in Shares of £1 each.
20,000 PAID-UP SHARES

To be retained by the Proprietors, and 40,000 to be allotted to the Public, to be paid for in calls of not more than 2s. 6d. each, at intervals of not less than months.

The Currawang Mine is on a freehold property of 322 acres, situated at Currawang, about twenty-two miles from Gouilburs, and seven from Collector.

The mine being within a reasonable distance of Sydney, intending applicants for shares are invited to inspect the property, and judge for thenselves. The proprietors depend entirely on the merits of the property, and do not care to put forward names of influence to assist them in forming a company.

a company.

The propositions undertake that the PROFITS of the first TWO YEARS shall, in the first instance, be devoted to the payment of a DIVIDEND at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on the subscribed capital paid up, before taking a similar or any dividend whatever on their reserved shares, and they further undertake not to SELL any of their paid up shares until after a dividend has been declared.

Allotments of shares will be made as far as practicable PRO RATA, with due regard to applications for small numbers.

August.

Applications for shares to be made on before the 31st instant to the undersigned, by whom the property has been inspected, and from whom prospectuses, forms of application, and all particulars can be procured, and who will retain all applications unopened till the day of allotment.

CATLLE PERISHING FOR WANT IN THE GOULBURN DISTRICT—A great number of cattle have died and are still dying from want of sufficient feed; and, to make the matter worse, they have been in most cases working bullocks. Several of our small settlers have lost nearly the whole of their teams. There is every reason to fear that as the cows calve they also will in many cases die, and a great many of the calves will have to be killed to preserve the mothers. A good fall of rain will very shortly be required, the winter having, on the whole, been a dry one, and the ground never once saturated with moisture.—Goulburn Herald of Saturday.

placing them on the bridge of one of our mill furnaces, side by side with a formkirk and one of Sharp's English fire-bricks, and found that the colonial brick stood the action of fire equal to the Scotch or English. My intention is to use them in our works instead of the imported.

ESIABLISHED 23 Years.—De L. Street Control of the control of th sworn to. Eminent heepital physicians of Lendon stated that Dr. J. Cohis Browne was the discoverer of Chlorodyne; that they prescribe it largely, and mean no other than Dr. Browne's.—See Thers, July 13, 1864.

The public, therefore, are cautioned against using any other than Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHILDRO-DYNE.

FRVERS, DYSENTERY, DIARRHCEA, Consumption, Cougha, Asthma, Bronchitis, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, &c.—The safest and best remedy is that marvellous one known as CHLORODYNE, which was dissovered by Dr. J. Collis Browne, M. R.C.S.L. (Ex-Army Modical Staff), and the secret of its recipe confided only to J. T. DAVEN-PORT, pharmaceutical chemist, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury-square, who is the sole manufacturer. Modical testimony turnished by the highest authorities in military, naval, and civil practice, and the numerous gratifying statements from the public generally, satabilishes this modiciae as invaluable. It relieves pain, soothes the system, inducing refreshing and soothing alseps, without producing or leaving any umpleasant effects like opium, and may be taken at any time in sfew drop dome.

CRING'S WORM-DESTROYING LOZENGES have long held a distinguished reputation, and are still and increasingly patronised by the highest names in rank, respectability, and science, from a personal knowledge of their utility in their own families. It is a fact established by the annual Bills of mortality that one half of the children born are cut of before attaining seven years of age, and the fruitful source of this mortality is found to exist in that foul state of the atomach and bowels which produces the generation of worms. As the safe restorer of infantine health, in this critical state, many anxious mothers, who have successfully had recontrae to those losenges, oan gratefully testify to their excellence.
